WORDS FROM WANDA

What Do Your Kids Really Need?

Finally, I would like to add a seventh thing your child really needs – a relationship with Jesus.

From infancy we must start to prepare our children for the stage of accountability. Every child's first experience with Jesus begins with the personal touch from a parent. By singing to our children about Jesus' love and continually telling them that Jesus' loves them we begin to prepare them for the day that they accept Him as Savior. Bringing a young child to church and having family devotions also gives the child glimpses of the love of Jesus. The attitudes and actions of the parents show Jesus to a child.

There is not an age of accountability, but a stage of accountability. For every child that stage is different. A child is ready to receive Jesus as Savior when He understands that he has done wrong, that Jesus died for that wrong, and that he needs God's forgiveness. That does not mean that the child knows everything there is to know about being a Christian. It is a process. After all, didn't Jesus in the Bible say that we all must come to Him with child-like faith?

Let me encourage you to begin now to model Jesus to your children and to point them in the direction of the Savior.
